Chuck Barnett wouldn't think of collecting stamps. Instead the assistant manager of Cable Airport in Upland enjoys tracking down, buying, restoring and collecting military vehicles.

Barnett and about six other Upland residents are active members in the Southern California Military Vehicle Collector's Club.

One of their favorite haunts is the airport, which resembles a National Guard Armory graveyard.

"You know we're the fastest growing wheeled vehicle collectors organization there is in this area. We're not militaristic. It's just like anybody else collecting Model A Fords," Barnett said.

Rambo he's not. Barnett isn't even a veteran but he became involved with the club because of some of his friends. Although his collecting has its highs and lows, he loves it.

Not only do club members share information about the vehicles, they also participate in various family oriented outings.

Many of the restored vehicles are operable. The California Department of Motor Vehicles permits collectors to buy historical plates for vehicles at least 20 years old, he said.

"You know there is an old saying about collectors of military vehicles. If you get OD (olive drab) paint in your blood you get infected with collecting the vehicles," he said with a laugh.

"I've always worked with my hands and I really enjoy piecing these vehicles back together. Once some of these vehicles have been in civilian hands they've been changed and it's a challenge to put them back together."

The national organization schedules a convention every year. One is planned this year in Massachusetts and Barnett said he hopes to attend.

But when conventions aren't scheduled, the local chapter meets the second Sunday of every month in the Glendale College parking lot.

So Upland members pile into a restored military staff car owned by one of the group, drive their restored vehicles out of their garages and head to Glendale. The group's convoy makes an interesting sight on the freeway, he said.

"A lot of young people give us the thumbs up sign when they see us on the freeway. I think the M*A*S*H movie and television show really have helped the popularity of the military and of military vehicles," the collector said.

Barnett owns at least six vehicles himself and a variety of parts from others. Other club members own everything from military ambulances and motorcycles to tanks.

"Most people think the only military vehicles there are are jeeps. That's not true. There is a wide range of military vehicles," he said.

Many club members who can afford the costly move ship the vehicles home from overseas. Others, like Barnett, buy theirs from club members or through the Truck Trader, a classified paper with information about military vehicles and parts.

"There were a lot of vehicles left in Europe after the last war," he said.

Several film production companies routinely contact club members about possibly using their vehicles in movies. Barnett said collectors are cautious about the offers because the vehicles can be ruined.

"Sometimes I think I've gone too far with my collecting. During the winter it's too cold to work on the vehicles in the garage, but when spring comes I get excited all over again," he said.

ALBA aims at helping businesses succeed

By Suzanne Sproul

Helping Latinos and non-Latinos succeed in business is the aim of the Alliance of Latino Business Associates (ALBA).

"A group of civic-minded people recognized the need to be able to deal with the Latino community amongst ourselves. Many members of the Latino community needed business contacts to propel them forward," said Roman Rodriguez, ALBA membership chairman.

So the group banded together and now offers members business contacts and marketing/public relations firms to enhance their businesses.

ALBA also conducts an annual job fair, helping to put people in contact with the right educational or business sources needed to accomplish their goals, he said.

The group's business development committee periodically holds seminars for its members, all with the aim of improving members' businesses, he said.

"Many Latinos are very conservative. They are willing to work long, hard hours, and for many vacations simply aren't taken. These people can be locked in if they aren't helped," Rodriguez said.

The 3-year-old group routinely mails out about 500 newsletters, but only about 40 members regularly attend breakfast meetings.

ALBA, operating in 11 cities, some of them in the West Valley, is a non-profit corporation.

One of its projects is the Lupe Biegar Scholarship Fund, which awards scholarships to high school students considering careers in business administration, education, engineering, law and medicine.

"Personally, being a member of this organization has provided me with a great deal of satisfaction. I've been able to help several with some of the business knowledge I've acquired in 26 years," said the owner of a construction company.

Rodriguez said group members don't want to be role models. They do want to help anyone, Latino or not, succeed in business, he said.

The organization's officers, including Ed Winston, attorneys Jimmy Gutierrez and Rene Pimentel and Dr. Robert Briseno, all are successful in the community because of their hard work and dedication, according to Rodriguez.

"These are people on the move; they're achievers," he said. "The goal of this group is to project to the community that we are a community who wants to retain our cultural and ethnic origins, but we invite everyone to work with us."

Gutierrez said the organization's goal and the reason he joined the group are the same.

"I think the group is trying to help our businesses grow. We want to form a network of existing businessmen and increase our business opportunities," Gutierrez said.

Pimentel said the organization operates similarly to a miniature chamber of commerce.

"There is a large market out there. All we want is a fair share of it. The group wants all the different aspects of society to meet and help each other," he said.

ALBA membership isn't limited to Latinos. The only requirement to be a voting member of the organization is to own a business.

Sycamore custodian honored

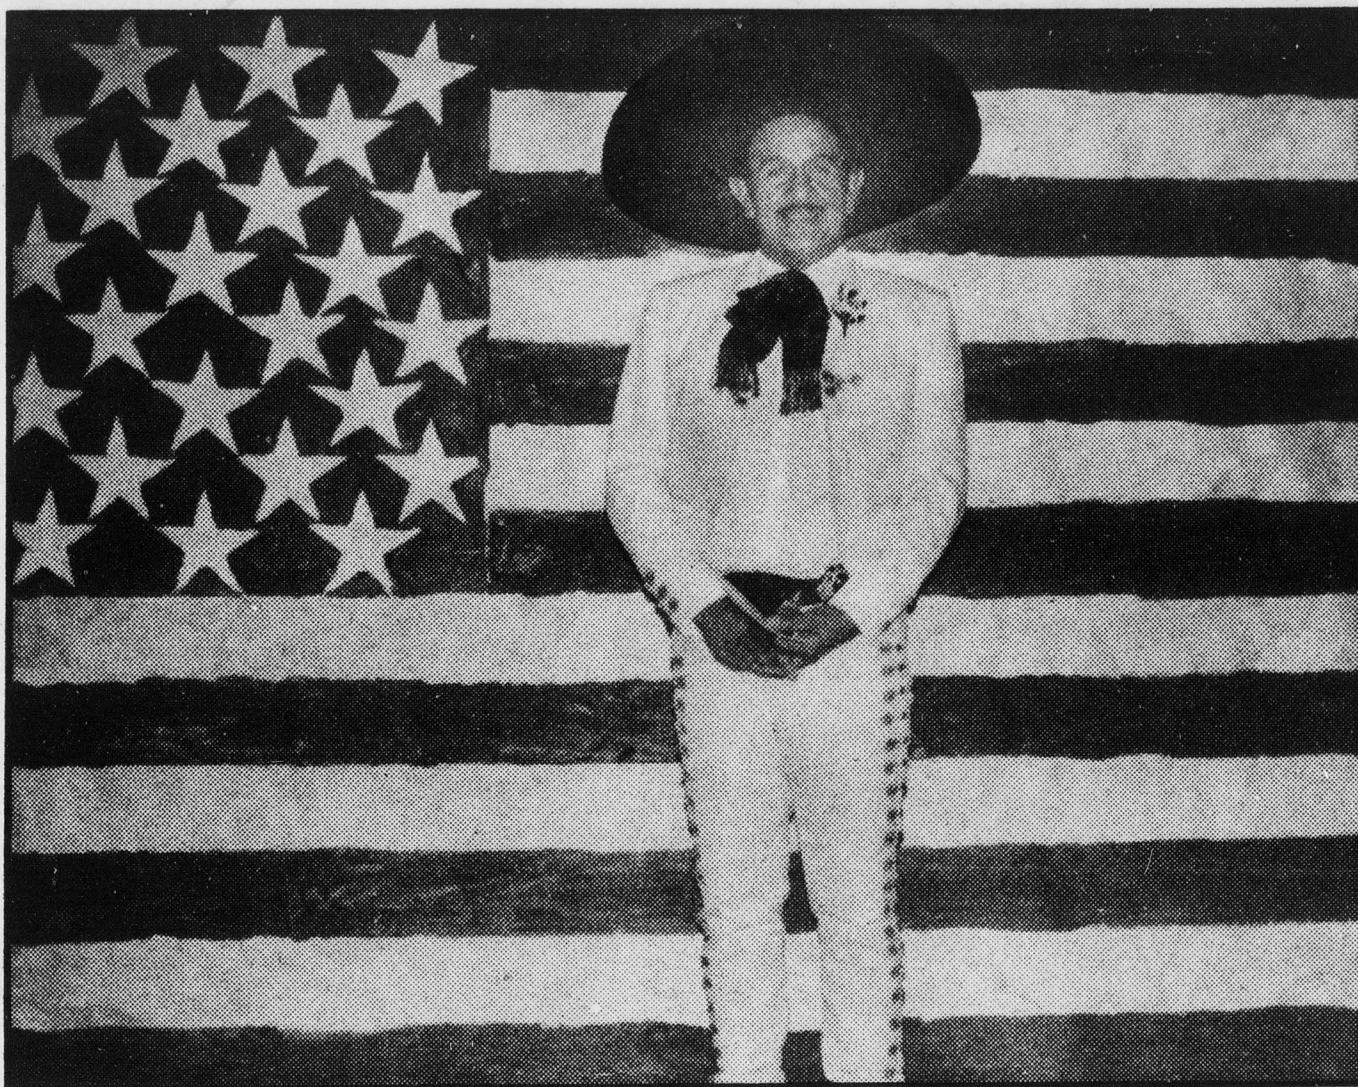

Sycamore Elementary School awarded its annual service award to its head custodian Tony Mendoza.

Mendoza has worked for the Upland School District for 23 years and has been at Sycamore for six of those years.

"I was in shock," he said of receiving the award. "I couldn't even remember the names of my children, or my wife for that matter. It was very flattering."

Mendoza is also president of the the classified employees bargaining unit for the district, the 200-member California School Employees Association.

This is not the first time Mendoza has been rewarded for his efforts with the district's children. In 1968 he received Sierra Vista Elementary's Honorary Service Award.

Tony Mendoza, Sycamore Elementary's head custodian, received the school's annual service award.

ALHS boy's expulsion is upheld

By Patrick McGreevy

The expulsion of a student from Alta Loma High School has been upheld by the San Bernardino County board of education despite complaints from the youth's mother that the expulsion is based on evidence seized in illegal searches of the student by truant officers off campus.

The county board upheld a decision by the Chaffey Joint Union High School District expelling 15-year-old Daniel Moore for smoking on campus and having a marijuana pipe and firecrackers in his possession.

The youth's mother, Trudy Moore, had argued that the pipe and firecrackers were found by truant officers who searched her son off campus without probable cause and in violation of the 4th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

She had told the county board

Attorney Jeff King named Rancho Cucamonga mayor

By Marianne Aiken

Attorney Jeff King was named mayor of Rancho Cucamonga by his fellow City Council members last Wednesday night, following the resignation of Jon Mikels.

Planning Commission chairman and mayoral candidate Dennis L. Stout asked the day before that Mayor Pro Tem Dick Dahl, who is not interested in running for mayor, fill the mayor's position until the November election.

Stout hoped to prevent any other council members who might be planning on running for mayor from getting an incumbent's advantage over him.

In reaction to Stout's plea, Dahl told The Daily Report March 4 that he would be willing to take the mayor's seat if he was confirmed as acting mayor by the other council members.

But Dahl changed his mind by the time the council took action the night of the March 5 meeting.

"Based on what took place in The Daily Report, if any of the council members are inclined to place my name in nomination, I decline that nomination," Dahl said before the council started to discuss the nomination.

King was then nominated by Councilwoman Pam Wright to perform the ceremonial duties of mayor until the November election. King won on a 4-0 vote with Councilman Chuck Buquet abstaining.

Buquet said he abstained from the vote because he "very well could be a candidate" for mayor this fall, and because he did not want his vote to be perceived as an endorsement.

"Rather than having that become an issue down the road, I decided to abstain," Buquet said.

Mikels announced March 4 that he would resign at the conclusion of the March 5 council meeting so he could pursue his June election challenge to Cal McElwain for the 2nd Supervisorial District on a full-time basis.

Mikels is also expecting to be installed as the president of the Southern California Association of Governments in April.

The morning after the vote, Dahl said he was no longer

Friends of R.C. Branch Library hold book sale

The Friends of the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library annual book sale is being held today through Sunday.

A large collection of books donated during the past year will be offered for sale, including almost-new and used books ranging from encyclopedias to cook books.

Proceeds from this year's book sale will be used to buy video cassettes, talking cassettes, and children's books for the library.

In previous years, proceeds from the book sale have been used to enlarge and update the library's reference collection, for a glass display case, a glass storage shed, and books in special interest areas.

The hours of the book sale are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

The sale will be held at the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library, 9191 Base Line Road, Rancho Cucamonga.

For further information, call 982-9260 or 987-3107.

Diane Williams, book sale coordinator; Charlie Miller, president of the Friends of the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library; and Lynne Parker, Friends membership chairwoman, prepare for this week's four-day annual book sale of the Friends of the Rancho Cucamonga Branch Library. Proceeds from the sale are used for new library materials.

Developers reach compromise with residents

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Developers of an Upland housing project reached a compromise with nearby residents last week, even though its original plans already met city code.

About 100 neighbors of the proposed 65-home project signed a petition against the J.M. Peters Co. development. Some of the residents brought that petition with them to the Feb. 18 City Council meeting.

The council put off a decision on the project when the company's vice president, Robert Liewer, agreed to meet with some of the homeowners.

The company's plan called for all the homes on the 20-acre lot between Erin and Albright avenues to be two stories high.

The homeowners said the buildings looming over their own single-story homes would not be a good mix.

Liewer met last month with eight neighbors, Planning Director Bill Young and a representative of the engineering department.

Liewer explained that the company had to keep the houses two stories tall in order to build them big enough to make a profit.

However, rather than build the traditional two-story homes on Pinto Court in which one level is set squarely on the other, he agreed to make smaller second floors that drop off. This will be less imposing on the single-story homes across the street, he said, and will allow the company to keep a minimum square footage.

The homes in the new plan will be somewhat smaller than the others the company plans to build in the area.

In addition, Liewer agreed to stagger the homes on Pinto court with varying setbacks from the road. Most of the six homes will be 33 feet back from the road rather than the required 23 feet, leaving the existing homes with more privacy.

Finally, the company decided to lower the ground under the proposed houses by about two feet, so they will not overshadow the present homes as much.

At last week's council meeting, where the company's project was approved, Mayor Richard Anderson praised the company's willingness to work with the residents when it was not required by law.

A.L. district doubles builders' fees

By Marianne Aiken

The Alta Loma School District board of trustees doubled the district's builders' fees last Monday.

The new builders' fee for single-family dwellings is $2,450, up from $1,100, and the new fee for multiple-family dwellings and mobile homes was raised to $1,225 from $550.

The new rate became effective March 3.

Ten builders who had letters of certification of capacity on file with the school district were allowed to pay their fees at the old rate as long as they pay by March 31.

"There is a little bit of a grace period there," said Stacy Nelson, Alta Loma School District administrator of business services.

An additional $3.9 million will be generated by the fee increase, said Alta Loma School District superintendent John McMurtry.

The new funds will be used for relocatable classrooms while the district tries to get state funds to build permanent school buildings.

"Right now the whole state aspect is really in a process of change," said McMurtry.

The one-time builders' fee is a

Chaffey forecasts hike in developer fees

By Matt Coker

While saying the district would rather not place the burden of funding new classrooms on the backs of builders and, ultimately, home buyers, Chaffey officials recently told developers building fees will more than likely have to be increased.

And, at least from the comments of a development consultant present at last week's CJUHSD board of trustees meeting, developers understand Chaffey's dilemma.

Hardy Strozier, representing Robertson Homes, which has plans to build huge apartment projects in South Ontario and Rancho Cucamonga (which are the district's two high-growth areas), agreed with Chaffey's own projected housing need figures.

A previous study indicated growth would increase in the district from 14,115 students enrolled last October to 15,466 enrolled in October 1990. The figures were based on the number of students already registered in schools which feed into the Chaffey district.

See CHAFFEY/Page 12

way of getting builders to pay for the school facilities that will be needed by the additional students attracted to a school district by new housing.

Nelson said there are some new rules to go along with the increase in builders' fees, rules which the Building Industry Association (BIA) is labeling an attempt by the school district to "circumvent the law."

In the past, the school district would sign a letter certifying the capacity of a new development when the builder came in and requested it, Nelson said.

The letter, used to estimate the number of students that would be generated by a particular development, was then kept on file with the school district until the city was ready to issue a building permit to the builder.

When builders reached the building permit stage, they would request a receipt from the school district to give to the city on the letter of certification and then pay the builders' fee.

Under the new rules, builders will be required to pay their fees to the school district at the time they get their certification of capacity letter.

Nelson said the change was made to allow for better planning.

"At least it synchronizes the process so that once they do pull their letter of certification, they're making a commitment to follow through with the development."

Tom Kohl, a legislative analyst with the BIA, said after the vote, the fee increase was an attempt by the school district to get around the law. The state's temporary classroom law, allows the school district to exact developers fees to temporarily house students, Kohl said.

Rancho Cucamonga has an ordinance which sets the builders' fee level at $1,100 for single-family homes, he added.

"It's just another way for them to circumvent going before the City Council," Kohl said.

Whether the school district is required to go before the City Council to increase builders'

Automobile recognition banquet held

Recently, the Inland Empire Chapter of the California Association of Regional Occupational Centers and Programs hosted an automotive recognition banquet at the Southern California Edison building in Rialto.

The purpose of the banquet was to honor automotive instructors, business representatives, and outstanding students from each of the four ROP's in the chapter — Baldy View, Colton-Redlands-Yucaipa, Riverside County, and San Bernardino County. Each business representative and student received a plaque and the teachers received a certificate.

Marland Hunt, Trade and Industry Specialist for Baldy View ROP, presented awards to the following local schools include:

- Auto Body Paint/Repair — Chino High School, David Iverson, instructor; Tom Lucas from Drew Carriage, industry representative; and Roy Landgrave, student from Chaffey High School.

- Automotive — Claremont High School, Vince Vanni, instructor; Ed Holman from Hooker Headers, industry representative; and Steve Magurette and Joe Magurette, students from Upland High School.

Baldy View Regional Occupational Program is part of the public school educational system and an extension of the Bonita, Chaffey, Chino, Claremont and Pomona school districts.

PERMANENT HAIR REMOVAL

Susan Smith, Registered Electrologist

Unwanted hair can be safely removed from any part of the body by electrolysis, with the exception of the nostrils and inner ears. Eyebrows can be shaped, the upper lip "cleared", ugly chin hair removed, hairlines reshaped, the bikini line defined-comfortably and efficiently.

Best results are achieved with a planned program. Treatments are usually 15 to 60 minutes per week and continue until the area is completed. Then, only a general clean-up may be necessary once or twice a year. New hair growth depends on each individual's glandular pattern.

Disaster group prepares for quake

By Suzanne Sproul

Preparing for a potential earthquake in the West Valley is the best defense for survival, according to local disaster preparedness groups.

In conjunction with Gov. George Deukmejian's declaration of April 14-20 as Earthquake Preparedness Week, the Upland Fire Department is coordinating a film project scheduled to be aired on Channel 46 in April. The one-hour panel discussion/film will be broadcast in San Bernardino, Los Angeles and Orange counties.

According to an official state disaster planning scenario, most if not all of the manmade structures in the West Valley will sustain some damage if a major earthquake rumbles through the area.

Water supplies would be restricted and sewage treatment facilities would shut down, experts said.

Local streets and freeway traffic will be disrupted but the exact damage toll can't be predicted, according to the scenario produced by the California Department of Conservation Division of Mines and Geology.

Local agencies want to eliminate or at least minimize the damage an earthquake would do to the West Valley. Participants in the local program include the Upland Police Department, Upland School District, Ontario Fire Department, California Highway Patrol, San Bernardino Sheriff's substation in Rancho Cucamonga, Montclair Fire Department, Central School District, Ontario-Montclair School District and Chaffey Joint Union High School District.

Pete Bryan, Upland fire division chief, said the program will include film coverage of last year's earthquake in Mexico and a panel discussion with local emergency personnel addressing particular concerns

"Apathy will kill people. Maybe they think something is coming but they're relying upon public servants or they don't think something will happen," Bryan said.

"We want this program to be graphic and to provide information the public will need. Unfortunately things like the Mexico earthquake must still happen to serve as reminders of what we might face if and when the big one strikes."

Pacific Bell, Federal Emergency Management Administration and Channel 4 in Los Angeles have agreed to allow local agencies to use portions of films they have

No research and development office uses allowed along Haven

By Marianne Aiken

Because of the lack of a definition of what constitutes research and development, there will be no research and development office uses permitted in the Haven Avenue Overlay District in Rancho Cucamonga.

The City Council killed on the first reading last Wednesday an amendment requested by the Planning Commission to include research and development office uses along the Haven Avenue corridor.

Dan Richards of Stephen Daniels Commercial Brokerage Inc. told the council that he felt allowing research and development office uses along Haven would bring down land values and would be incompatible with other developments there.

"This will lead to requests for the general eroding of standards of the quality office environment we want to create on Haven Avenue," Richards said.

Tim J. Beedle, vice president of planning and design for A.H. Reiter Development of Rancho Cucamonga, said research and development uses along the corridor should be permitted unless they interfere with the office character of the district.

"It is essentially amplifying the concept of the overlay district itself," Beedle said.

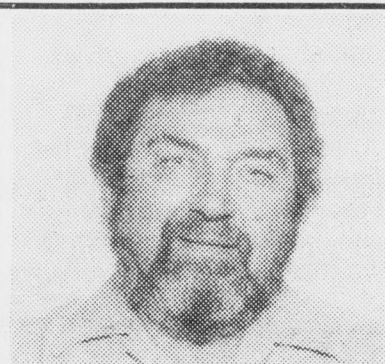

Beedle mentioned that the Haven Plaza has an exercise studio, which is not a strict office use.

The overlay district is an area along Haven Avenue between Foothill Boulevard and Fourth Street that is planned primarily for administrative and professional offices.

The amendment was requested by the Planning Commission to correct an inconsistency between the overlay district and the industrial area specific plan.

Last August, the City Council amended the industrial area specific plan to include office and manufacturing uses in connection with research and development in an area that overlapped with the Haven Avenue Overlay District.

"H.O.T. TIPS"

Here's a fast way to clean files that have become clogged. Press a length of duct or contact adhesive tape firmly to the face of the file. Lift the tape and you'll also lift off the packed wood fibers and even soft metal filings.

The pilot bearing on your router bits will occasionally get clogged with sawdust or glue. You can clean the bearing with lacquer thinner and then spray with "WD-40" or silicone.

Most saber saw blades made for cutting wood are stamped out on huge punch press machines. For this reason they are not highly sharpened and often tear the wood rather than cut it. This gives a splintered cut, particularly on plywood. You will get a much neater cut if you take a few minutes and sharpen each blade before use. Secure the blade in a vise and file each tooth to a sharp edge with a small triangle file.

R.C. council lets municipal code loophole stand

By Marianne Aiken

Following an "if it ain't broke, don't fix it" philosophy, the Rancho Cucamonga City Council last week refused a Planning Commission request to close a loophole in the planning process.

In a 3-2 split vote Wednesday, the Council let stand a section of the municipal code which allows applicants to repeatedly come back to the Planning Commission for approval on substantially the same projects that have already been rejected by the Commission.

The amendment would have changed the environmental assessment and development code so that no application for a revision or modification could be filed within a year of the date the final decision-making body rejected the substance of the application.

"Under the current wording, a developer who fails to exercise the appeal process could repeatedly reapply to eliminate, amend or modify certain conditions of approval of a project," stated associate planner Nancy Fong in a report to the council.

The issue had come before the council twice before and was voted down on the second reading March 5.

"I still see the same problem with it that I had the last twotimes," said then-

Councilman Jeff King, who was later named mayor that night. "I can see many more times when maybe a project is approved with certain conditions and that once it's approved, the applicant might want to come back and seek modifications."

King said the city planning staff and the Planning Commission had failed to demonstrate that the so-called loophole monopolized a lot of planning time.

Councilman Dick Dahl agreed, calling the proposed amendment "overly restrictive."

"If nothing is broke, don't fix it," Dahl said.

Community Development Director Jack Lam said 3 to 4 projects had come up recently that created a cyclical problem in the planning process.

Lam said the Planning Commission wanted to eliminate "frivolous" reapplications by rejected applicants.

"With the length of the (Planning Commission) agenda, it does cause problems," Lam said.

"It was initiated by the Planning Commission, because in their opinion, they perceived a problem."

Councilman Chuck Buquet spoke in favor of amendment.

Buquet and former mayor Jon Mikels voted for the amendment, and King, Dahl and Councilwoman Pam Wright voted against it.

interested in getting the mayor's position because he could not get a unanimous vote of support from the council.

"I didn't feel good about it," he said.

He added that the council has several important decisions to make in the coming months and that a mayor who can unify the council is needed.

"As a result I don't feel I could unify the council," he said.

Dahl said he felt he could have been appointed mayor on a 3-2 vote. He said he did not expect support from Mikels but declined to name who else would have opposed his appointment.

King, who was elected to the council in 1984 and served on the Planning Commission for 3½ years before that, including two years as Planning Commission chairman, did not rule himself out as a mayoral candidate this fall.

King said he was pleased about his appointment, but didn't know if he would be running for election.

A Rancho Cucamonga mayor will be directly elected by voters for the first time in November. Previous mayors were all appointed by the council, but a successful 1984 ballot measure changed the mayor's seat to a directly elected position with a two-year term.

Of the two council members who might run for mayor, Buquet had more to say about his yet-to-be-announced mayoral candidacy.

Buquet said one of the things holding up his decision to run for mayor is the fact that the mayor's term will be a two-year term instead of a four-year term. The council positions are four-year terms.

Another reason he's waiting to announce is that he said he doesn't want the campaign to interfere with council business.

"As soon as the campaigning starts, you're going to have the productivity level of the council go down," Buquet said.

Mt. Baldy School to get help in buying new bus

Mt. Baldy School will be getting some help from the state in buying a new school bus.

The tiny school of about 100 students lodged on the mountainside has been granted $24,547 to help replace one of its two buses.

"We're replacing our smaller and older bus ... because we need a larger bus with a powerful engine to climb the mountain," said Principal Madison Lowe.

Although Dan Reibson, of the State Department of Education, said the grant was based on the price of a new bus, Lowe said that the new one would actually cost about $55,000.

Lowe explained that the Mt.

Baldy Joint School District — of which Mt. Baldy School is the only member — will be replacing a 30-passenger bus with one twice its size. The district will be making up the difference in cost for that and special equipment that will be added to help the bus make its steep climbs, he said.

The cost of the new bus would have eaten up about 10 percent of the district's entire budget, if it had to pay for the entire vehicle, Lowe said.

The heavy burden of the purchase of new buses on small districts is the reason for the grants, according to Reibson. He said that $3.1 million will be distributed by the state to 121 small school districts during the 1985-86 school year.

Reibson said this is the only source of funding for school buses and that there is no money for the larger districts needing buses. Grants for larger districts were discontinued in 1984, he said.

The Mt. Baldy district must sell its old bus, which has been in use since 1967, before it can receive the state money.

Lowe said he hopes to get $3,500 for the bus, which he describes as in good shape "for a '67." The district's second bus is 12 years old.

Upland slates $12,200 for downtown facelift

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The city of Upland is contributing a total of $12,200 toward a facelift for the Upland Town Center.

In October the City Council voted to spend $6,000 from the general fund to hire Orange County consultant Bob Clayton to form an economic development corporation and come up with some plans for revitalizing the downtown area. About $1,000 of the funds was for legal fees.

Clayton met with a corporation formation committee weekly during the past four months, and they developed five programs of action. Plans call for a town center logo, new signs and new parking arrangements.

However, as Clayton reported to the council last week, the town center needs a grant of $6,200 to get the program off the ground during the first six months.

The council voted 3-1 to give the additional funds, with Councilman Frank Hoover absent. Councilwoman Dina Hunter cast the dissenting vote, saying she did not object to the plans, but felt the money should be a loan rather than a grant.

Calling it a "reinvestment of community funds back into the community," Councilman Frank Carpenter led the vote for the grant. "An investment of $6,200 is a worthy investment ... the city and the taxpayers would receive it back tenfold in the future," he said.

Doug Marr, chairman of the formation committee, said the plan's emphasis is to bring shoppers into the four-block area two blocks off Euclid Avenue on Ninth Street.

"There are a lot of people in the Upland area that have been here quite awhile and aren't even aware that the little downtown area exists," he said. "It's kind of off the beaten track."

To amend the situation, the corporation will create a logo using the kiosk to give the area an identity, much like Mountain Green's (shopping center) tree logo, Marr said.

That graphic will be used for advertising, promotions and letterheads. In addition, it will adorn new signs which will be

Free dump day set

A free dump day for Upland residents will be held at the Milliken Avenue Sanitary Landfill on April 12 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

placed off the freeway ramp and on Euclid Avenue and Arrow Highway, directing motorists to the downtown, he said.

Parking is also a problem, Marr said, noting that many motorists drive around the area in circles looking for center spaces, which are usually full.

The two parking lots behind the stores are rarely used, he said.

To change that situation, the corporation plans to hire young men at minimum wage as parking attendants on a trial basis for the off-street lots. The uniformed youths will direct customers around the area, invite them to walk through the back entrances of stores to reach the storefronts and inform them of upcoming events.

Finally, if a bill passes the state legislature requiring stricter earthquake standards, Marr said, some of the buildings in the downtown will not meet them. The corporation will offer low-interest loans for the safety remodeling, with the condition that the property owners add a new facade to their buildings at the same time, he said.

Marr estimates the budget for the first six months at $11,850.

Even the potential loss of Upland High School, which may break away from the CJUHSD and unify with the Upland School District, would do little to ease the growth, officials said.

It is obvious that new, permanent school facilities will be needed. But for immediate classroom needs, developer fees, which have not been touched since their inception in 1979, will have to be raised, said Robert Murphy, Chaffey's business services director.

Murphy outlined other avenues the district will have to explore to fund new classrooms, such as applying for school building funds, studying year-round school schedules and participating with city redevelopment agencies.

But, in the meantime, Superintendent Mike Dirksen outlined the proposed fee schedule.

The current fee of $600 per single-family home and $300 per apartment or townhome would be raised during a three-step schedule to begin in July 1986, according to the plan.

On July 1, 1986, the fees would be $1,250 per home and $625 per multi-family dwelling. On Jan. 1, 1987, the fees would rise to $1,450 per home and $725 per multi-family unit. They would increase again — to $1,650 and $825 respectively — on July 1, 1987.

Dirksen said the fee schedule gives all developers plenty of "lead time." Builders can also move ahead with their projects under the old fees before the first increase goes into effect, he noted.

Strozier agreed with increasing the fees, but he suggested another manner which, he said, would be more precise and would be met with more acceptance from developers.

Strozier said the district's fee schedule for apartments appears fair for units with three or more bedrooms. But they are nearly double what they should be for two-bedroom apartments, which, Strozier said, generate fewer schoolchildren.

As a result, he said, the district should explore staggering the fee on the basis of the number of bedrooms in residences. Chaffey officials said they would consider the request.

It appears little help can be expected on the state level. An $800 million bond measure which will go before state voters in November will be on a list with 34 other money-seeking measures, Murphy noted.

Strozier concurred the bond may not be the answer, and added that little relief can be expected from the state Legislature.

fees or not is a "philosophical question," said McMurtry.

Recent court cases have shown that school districts can hike builders' fees without going before the City Council to get approval, said Rancho Cucamonga City Manager Lauren Wasserman.

"The only way we get involved is to make sure developers are meeting school needs,"

Cal State art show

Photography and etchings will be the focus of an art show assembled by three graduating seniors from California State University, San Bernardino.

The show, which continues through March 27, is in the university's art gallery. It features the works of Tami Mecham of Alta Loma, Michael Burke of San Bernardino and Sharon Zorn of Redlands.

Wasserman said.

Kohl said if a builder wanted to challenge the school district's new policy, it would lead to a lengthy court battle.

"I don't think there's a developer big enough in this area to go through all of this," Kohl said.

Although the BIA and local developers protested the fee increase when it was discussed at earlier school board meetings held Feb. 3 and Feb. 13, there was little discussion when the unanimous vote came March 3.

The Alta Loma School District is one of five school districts in Rancho Cucamonga, and the fourth school district in the city to raise its builders' fees recently.

The Etiwanda School District, Cucamonga School District, and Central School District recently raised their builders' fees.

The Chaffey Joint Union High School District also has schools in Rancho Cucamonga.

The school district currently has no new classroom space, and is expecting about 1,000 new students in the next five years, excluding students in the new Victoria planned community in Etiwanda, McMurtry said.

A new junior high school and two elementary schools are expected to be built in the district in the next five to six years, and there will be some improvements to an existing elementary school, with a total cost for the projects of about $25-30 million, McMurtry said.

"We're not relying on builders' fees for those funds," he added, referring to the district's efforts to raise state funds.

The district has an enrollment of about 5,200 right now, and uses nine trailers and four county relocatable buildings and 12 district relocatable buildings for extra classroom space.

Carden school's second lawsuit dismissed

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Carden Arbor View School's second lawsuit against the city of Upland was dismissed in Ontario Superior Court last week.

Judge William Hyde ruled that Upland has the right to enforce landscaping and roof requirements at the school, according to attorneys for both parties.

He denied the school's request to cancel the requirements, dissolving the temporary restraining order which had allowed the school to operate without complying to city laws until the case was heard in court, they said. However, the school can renew its lawsuit at a later date, the judge ruled.

Meanwhile, if the school continues to operate without obeying the city's requirements, the city could revoke its business license and shut it down, City Attorney Don Maroney said.

Last summer, the school was given until January to complete a new roof for one of its buildings on the corner of San Antonio Avenue and 15th Street. It was also given until that time to complete some landscaping on a nearly one-acre vacant lot adjoining the school.

The school obtained a restraining order from the court — preventing the city from enforcing the deadline — saying it needed more time to raise money for the project and complete the work.

The school estimates the cost of the work will be $55,000, according to its attorney Tim Brayton.

However, City Attorney Don Maroney has said repeatedly that the city is not asking for such elaborate work. The landscaping needs only to be a grass cover, he said, and the city has suggested a simpler roof than the one the school has planned. Both would cost "substantially" less than $55,000, he said.

The city's legal problems with the private, church-sponsored school began in September when Carden Arbor filed a lawsuit against the city for limiting its operating hours, because of the disturbance of after-hours traffic to the neighborhood.

That suit resulted in a compromise in late January, with the school using an alternative parking lot after school hours.

But Planning Director Bill Young said when the second suit was filed in early January that out-of-court disputes have been on-going with the school since it opened in 1981.

So far the city has not taken action to revoke the school's business license, Maroney said.

"The council will have to decide whether to revoke their permit or continue to try to work with them," he said.

Brayton said school officials want to work with city officials to solve the problems.

"It has been our position from the beginning that we needed more time and we still need more time," he said.

Although Maroney said the school has complained of the financial burden of city requirements, Brayton said the school's problems are not serious. He said the school will remain on the site at least until its lease runs out in 18 years.

at a public hearing last week that because she feels the truant officers violated her son's rights to protection from illegal search and seizure, the items confiscated should not have been admissible as evidence against her son in the Chaffey board's expulsion hearing.

Chaffey district representative Steven Butters and an attorney for the county board had argued that the exclusionary rule, regarding improperly obtained evidence being inadmissible, applies to juvenile and adult criminal court-cases but does not apply to student expulsion hearings by school boards.

The youth's mother said last week that the county board's ruling was "frightening" in its disregard for her son's constitutional rights. She said she will decide in the next few days whether to take the case to Superior Court.

"Not only am I disappointed, but it's also rather frightening," she said. "If we allow a school to exempt itself from honoring students' constitutional rights that opens the door for other government agencies to do the same."

Butters said last week that the county board affirms what he always has believed, that the expulsion case has nothing to do with constitutional issues, but instead, misbehavior.

In the meantime, Daniel Moore has been out of school since Oct. 15 and will continue to stay out of school until either his mother receives a court order forcing the school to readmit him or he makes application for readmission when the expulsion period is up in September.

Under the expulsion proceedings, a routine application for readmission of an expelled student does not automatically guarantee he will be readmitted, Butters said.

When You're Not Sure if it's Minor or Serious, You Want Secure Care.

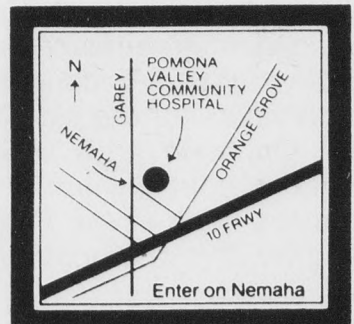

You're not a medical expert, so you're not always sure how serious an illness or accident may be.

That's why Pomona Valley Community Hospital developed Secure Care right next to its Emergency Room.

When you arrive at the emergency entrance, a special nurse will determine the severity of the problem. Serious emergencies are directed to the Emergency Room. Less serious problems are directed to Secure Care.

Secure Care has its own staff and separate treatment rooms to provide you with fast, efficient and inexpensive care. Secure Care is available for treating all types of minor illnesses and injuries from cuts and broken fingers to sore throats and flus.

If a person is unconscious, not breathing or bleeding badly, call 911.

Story by Andrew Horan

Alta Loma resident Mike Hewitt won three medals—one gold and two silver—at the recent Police and Fire Olympics at Mammoth Mountain Resort.

Hewitt, (right), a Pomona firefighter, has been competing in the olympics for the past 15 years. He also won a medal in 1984. Opposite page, Hewitt will turn 41 soon, but he maintains both a youthful physique and boyish charm. He exercises daily at the Family Fitness Center in Montclair, lifting weights and going through the paces of aerobics, to keep sharp.

I've been skiing all over the world," Mike Hewitt said with a smile. That worldly experience may have helped Hewitt, a 40-year-old Pomona fireman, win three medals (out of four events) in his age group at the recently completed Fire and Police Winter Olympics.

This was the 15th year Hewitt has traveled to Mammoth Mountain resort to compete in these olympics, but only the second year he has come home with a prize.

"I got a gold medal in the giant slalom two years ago," Hewitt said.

This year, he placed first in the three-kilometer cross-country race (in only his second time on cross-country skis) and second in both giant slalom and downhill events.

Hewitt finished out of the money in the fourth event, slalom racing, "because I don't get much chance to practice" skiing through the tight course.

This year, Hewitt, who lives with his wife and two children in Alta Loma, was the only West Valley police or fireman to participate in the olympics.

"I got a group of guys to go with me a few years ago, and they said they had a great time," Hewitt said from the kitchen table of fire station number two in Pomona. "But I can't get anybody to go back.

"The nearest place anybody came from around here was West Covina and Riverside."

One reason might be that Hewitt's colleagues may not be able to keep pace with the energetic athlete.

Only a streak of graying hair above his ears belies Hewitt's age. Otherwise, he has the tanned, muscular body of a collegiate and the charm of a fraternity boy.

He played football in high school and was all set to play in college at Mt. San Antonio Community College until his coach told the skinny youngster to put on weight.

"Everything was going good," Hewitt said, "and then I met a girl."

His grades plummeted, and Hewitt found himself looking for a job. "I had a half-brother who was working as a L.A. County fireman, and he told me the job was great," Hewitt recalled.

"He told me, 'You don't have to work in an office,' and I was hooked," Hewitt said. But America was fighting in Vietnam then, and no one would hire a 19-year-old potential draftee, he said.

So Hewitt beat the draft and enlisted in the Army. He landed in the fire corps, a position that took him to Germany and eventually to Vietnam, where he led a 10-man demolition team.

He managed to avoid injury despite being involved in the bloody Tet offensive of 1968 and earned a Bronze Star for meritorious achievement in land operations.

He came home to stay with his mother in West Covina. After spending a year working odd jobs, Hewitt was ready to re-enroll in college to play football.

Instead, he received an offer to work for the Pomona Fire Department, and his skiing craze was destiny.

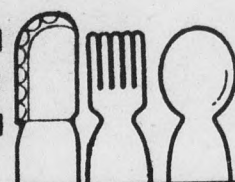

"I never skied in Germany when I was in the Army," Hewitt said. "My first time was with a bunch of guys from here, and I just loved it."

He came to love other sports upon his return as well. He is an avid work-out enthusiast, spending mornings sweating out aerobic and weight-machine routines. He plays racquetball regularly, and, of course, skis whenever the opportunity presents itself.

"I just hope I can get some of these guys out (to the olympics) next year," Hewitt said. "It's a lot of fun, and you can't beat the camaraderie."

ENTERTAINMENT & DINING GUIDE

California has its own Smithsonian in L.A.

By Jerry Roberts
Copley News Service

Don Muchmore likes gadgets. He's up to his eyeballs in gadgets. He's got more contraptions, doodads and whachamahoozits where he works than the wackiest inventor you ever saw in the movies.

Every day Muchmore walks through myriad cells and charts and dials and cogs to get to his office, where he lifts a blessing designed by AT&T and talks to people who make gadgets in distant cities and asks them to send him more gadgets or money so he can buy, build and show more gadgets.

He's director of the New California Museum of Science and Industry, which, in the past several years, has gone through $45.3 million in renovations and is due for another $19.6 million in changes within the next couple of years.

All that money. All those thingamabobs. Muchmore tells a story showing why he feels the gadgets are important to him, the state of California and the quality of life of its citizens:

"I'll tell you of a case that shows the impact the museum can have. I was making a pitch for funds to the administrators at TRW Inc. A group of employees as well as the executives sat in to listen.

"After I talked, a man got up and said, 'I'm a TRW scientist. I started taking my three sons to the Museum of Science and Industry in 1963. They loved the Mathematica exhibit. Today all three have Ph.D.s in math. All of them realized the abilities they had, and the museum was a great influence.'

"I've always remembered that. We try to bring in a touch of Barnum with a lot of Aristotle. The Barnum entertains the papas and moms, and the Aristotle educates the kids."

Today, it's more like a touch of "Star Wars" with a lot of National Aeronautics and Space Administration, especially in the Aerospace Complex, which includes the exhibits "Space Station Earth," "Flight," "Windows on the Universe" and "Space Shuttle."

The museum, through which 8 million people have passed since the beginning of the Games of the XXIII Olympiad in 1984, is the second-largest science and industry museum in the nation behind the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C. It is the third most attended of any museum in the United States, following the Smithsonian and Mellon Gallery, also in Washington.

The $45 million in completed changes, justifiably called a renaissance, included tripling the size of the museum and the erection of three new buildings, the Aerospace Complex, IMAX Theater and Mark Taper Hall of Economics and Finance.

The $19.6 million in future changes include upgrading and changing existing exhibits and creating new ones. Plans include:

Building chemistry, biology and physics exhibits.

The museum is open free to the public and currently includes these exhibits: "A Byte of Food," about food handling and preparation; "Aerospace Complex"; the five-story-high IMAX Theater; "Agriculture: The Roots of Your World"; "The Bicycle Company," a fascinating computer design center built by Hewlett-Packard Corp.; "Communicating," studies in media; "Computerworks," "Computer Workshop" and "Creative Computer"; "Electronic Media"; "Energy

Experience" and "Energy for the '80s"; "Fusion"; "Hall of Health"; "Mathematica"; "Mark Taper Hall of Economics and Finance"; "Natural Resources"; "Redwood Empire Room"; "Transporation," and "Wheels of Change."

The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, 700 State Drive, Exposition Park, Los Angeles; (213) 744-7400.

School registration

More than 16,000 kindergarten aged children need to register in San Bernardino County. During the months of March, April and May many local schools are registering children for kindergarten in the fall.

California state law requires children entering kindergarten to be up to date on their immunizations and children entering first grade to have a complete health check-up.

The Child Health and Disability Prevention Program of San Bernardino County Department of Public Health has regular clinics throughout the county where parents can schedule a health check-up. For more information, call 383-1542.

Same Day Surgery. You Walk In, And You Walk Out.

Our Day Care Surgery Center may be the right place to have your operation. An operation used to mean an extended hospital stay but with surgical advances many cases are handled in a single day on an outpatient basis at San Antonio's Day Care Surgery Center. Typically, a patient who is eligible walks into the center in the morning, has the operation an hour or so later, walks out in the afternoon, and is home in bed that same evening. The procedure couldn't be easier, not to mention the considerable cost savings. The Center handles virtually every form of surgery that does not require an overnight stay including cataract extraction, hernia repair, adenoidectomy, D & C, myringotomy and hemorrhoidectomy. As well as plastic surgery, oral surgery and orthopedic procedures. For elective, non-emergency surgery ask your doctor about San Antonio's Day Care Surgery Center or call us direct.

Candidates conclude filing for June ballot

By Don Green

Reps. Jerry Lewis and George Brown both escaped opposition in the June primary, but in November each will face a challenger who beat Friday's filing deadline.

R. "Sarge" Hall of El Mirage, a retired non-commissioned officer, was the only Democrat to file for the 35th Congressional District seat held by Lewis, R-Redlands.

Four Republicans are seeking the party's nomination to run against Brown, D-Riverside, in the 36th District.

Friday was the final day for most candidates to file nomination papers to qualify for the June ballot. Gerane Jacobsen, county registrar of voters, said many of the office seekers waited until the last day, keeping election workers busy.

Jacobsen said the registrar's office still must verify signatures for many candidates who filed Friday to make sure they qualified for the June ballot.

The five-day extension of the filing deadline until 5 p.m. Wednesday does not apply to any race in the West Valley. The extension goes into effect when an incumbent fails to return nomination papers.

The four Republicans running in the 36th Congressional District, which includes Ontario and Fontana are: Robert Henley of San Bernardino, Nina Nesbit Pierce of Ontario, Jim Norton of Fontana and Gary Richard Arnold of Riverside.

Henley is a businessman and former member of the San Bernardino City Council who was the Republican nominee defeated by Assemblyman Gerald Eaves, D-Rialto, in 1984.

Pierce, a longtime Republican activist in the West Valley, finished second in Republican primary two years ago in the 36th District to John Paul Stark.

Norton is half of a brother tandem seeking legislative offices and a first-time candidate.

Arnold, who listed himself as a businessman, could not be reached by phone Friday night. However, his name, Gary Richard Arnold, is exactly the same as that of a 1982 Republican congressional candidate who gained notoriety as the man President Reagan told to "shut up."

Reagan's remarks came during a lively shouting match at a White House conference for GOP candidates. Arnold was the Republican nominee, although disowned by the party, for a seat in Northern California.

In 1984, Arnold ran a quixotic campaign for president. Balding and bearded, he billed himself as the candidate who "looks like Lenin, talks like Lincoln."

Hall unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination as a write-in candidate in 1984 for Lewis' seat. No Democrat qualified for the ballot that year, assuring Lewis' re-election. The 35th District includes Chino, Montclair, Upland and Rancho Cucamonga.

Filing for the area's state Senate and Assembly seats brought no surprises. All candidates who earlier filed declarations of intention completed their requirements with the nomination papers. By districts, the candidates are:

- 34th Senate District: Sen. Ruben Ayala of Chino is the only Democrat. The Republicans are Steve Turner of Rialto, an accounting coordinator, and Daniel Norton of Fontana, a restaurant manager. Norton is the brother of Jim Norton, the congressional candidate.

- 61st Assembly District: Republican Assemblyman William Leonard of Redlands, Democrat Richard Valdez of Crestline and Margie Hart of Barstow, member of the American Independent Party. Hart, a writer and homemaker, ran two years ago. Valdez is an produced. Agencies also are planning to film program segments in the West Valley to bring the potential for disaster closer to home.

The panel will discuss the responsibilities of local law enforcement and fire officers and school personnel.

Bryan said if the earthquake program is successful, Channel 46 may produce similar programs about other potential disasters facing the West Valley.

Afterward the film will be used as an educational tool with local schools and groups.

Although most Southern Californians have learned to live with the potential destruction of property and lives, emergency personnel continually emphasize that complacency and apathy are the worst responses to a possible disaster.

"This film gives the public an opportunity to understand what we (emergency agencies) can and will do in a disaster," said Marti Higgins, disaster preparedness coordinator for Ontario.

Higgins said the program should visually show valley residents what can and will happen to them during an earthquake.

"With all the public speaking I do about disaster preparedness I find that people just don't relate it (an earthquake) to here," she said.

Claudia Maidenberg is coordinating program efforts for the various West Valley schools. She agreed about localizing the potential for disaster.

"I think it's far more effective when the film tells a person how an earthquake will affect him," Maidenberg said.

The program will cover the following items:

- Potential and threat of damage.
- Planning and the importance of the public adopting a "self-help" attitude.
- What local governments and agencies will and won't be able to do in an emergency.
- What a person at home, work or school should do during the earthquake.
- Long-term recovery plans.
- Sources of further information such as local police and fire departments and school districts.

"engineering support specialist."

All three candidates have uncontested primaries. The district is outside the West Valley.

● 62nd Assembly District: Republican Assemblyman William Lancaster of Covina and Democrat Wayne Wendt of West Covina are the only candidates. The district includes Upland.

● 65th Assembly District: Republican Assemblyman Chuck Bader of Pomona and Democrats Hal Jackson of Pomona and Bill Christopher of Hesperia. Jackson ran against Bader two years ago. Christopher listed his occupation as "retired military."

● 66th Assembly District: Assemblyman Gerald Eaves, D-Rialto, is the only incumbent legislator in the county challenged in the primary. John Hobbs of San Bernardino, a teacher and former councilman, ran for the Democratic nomination in 1984. He finished third behind Eaves and former Assemblyman Terry Goggin.

The only Republican candidate is Carol Turner of Rialto, manager of an insurance office. She is the wife of Steve Turner, the Republican Senate candidate. The district includes Fontana and part of Ontario.

The final week of the nomination period attracted few new candidates for county offices. Both of the West Valley's county supervisors face potentially strong opponents with experience as mayors.

Supervisor Cal McElwain, who lives just north of Upland, is seeking his third four-year term representing the 2nd District, which includes Upland, Rancho Cucamonga and Fontana.

His challengers are Rancho Cucamonga Councilman Jon Mikels, who recently stepped down as mayor to campaign for supervisor, and S.T. "Doc" Brannon of Phelan, an auto mechanic. Mikels also resigned last September as manager of the West Valley Superior Court Division to prepare for the race.

If none of the three receive a simple majority in the primary, the 2nd District contest would be decided in a November runoff.

The 4th District race will be decided in the primary. Supervisor Gus Skropos left the Ontario City Council in December when he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the surprise resignation of Robert Townsend.

Chino Mayor Larry Walker, an attorney, was the only other candidate to file. The district includes Chino, Montclair and Ontario.

Sheriff Floyd Tidwell is matched against Lawrence Henson of Hesperia, a

SPORTS

Smiles all around following title win

These are happy days in Rancho Cucamonga, especially at Alta Loma High School. That's what a CIF championship can do for a community and school.

"It was a real positive experience for our school and the entire community," ALHS athletic director Mike Kettle said. "Alta Loma has always supported its soccer programs well."

The support was there Friday night on the Gahr High School campus as the Braves earned the Division 4A boys' soccer title with a 1-0 victory over previously undefeated Simi Valley.

Tim Sowers' 15-yard shot eluded Simi Valley goalkeeper Steve Bame 40 seconds into the second half to give the Braves the margin they needed to bring the the West Valley its first soccer title since Ontario Christian turned the trick in 1982.

The win capped a storybook ending for a team that had floundered just a few weeks ago. But the Braves pulled it together down the playoff stretch, knocking off three highly-touted opponents en route to a thrilling championship win.

Sowers' shot, plus the determined tenacity of goalkeeper Mike Collins and sweeper David Kolde were decisive in a nip-and-tuck battle, played the majority of the time at a racehorse pace.

"All year long he's been saving us," said coach Pete Gunby of Collins after the game. "He got us here with two tremendous saves against Torrance (in the quarterfinals). I just can't say enough about him. I thought we played them really well until the last 20 minutes and then Mike carried us from there."

Collins, teary-eyed after the game, was quick to spread the credit, noting Kolde in particular. "He's the best sweeper I've ever had back there with me. These guys are the best."

Said Gunby of Kolde, "He's been our most consistent player all year. He read the players on the other team well and he was always there to make the tackles when we needed them."

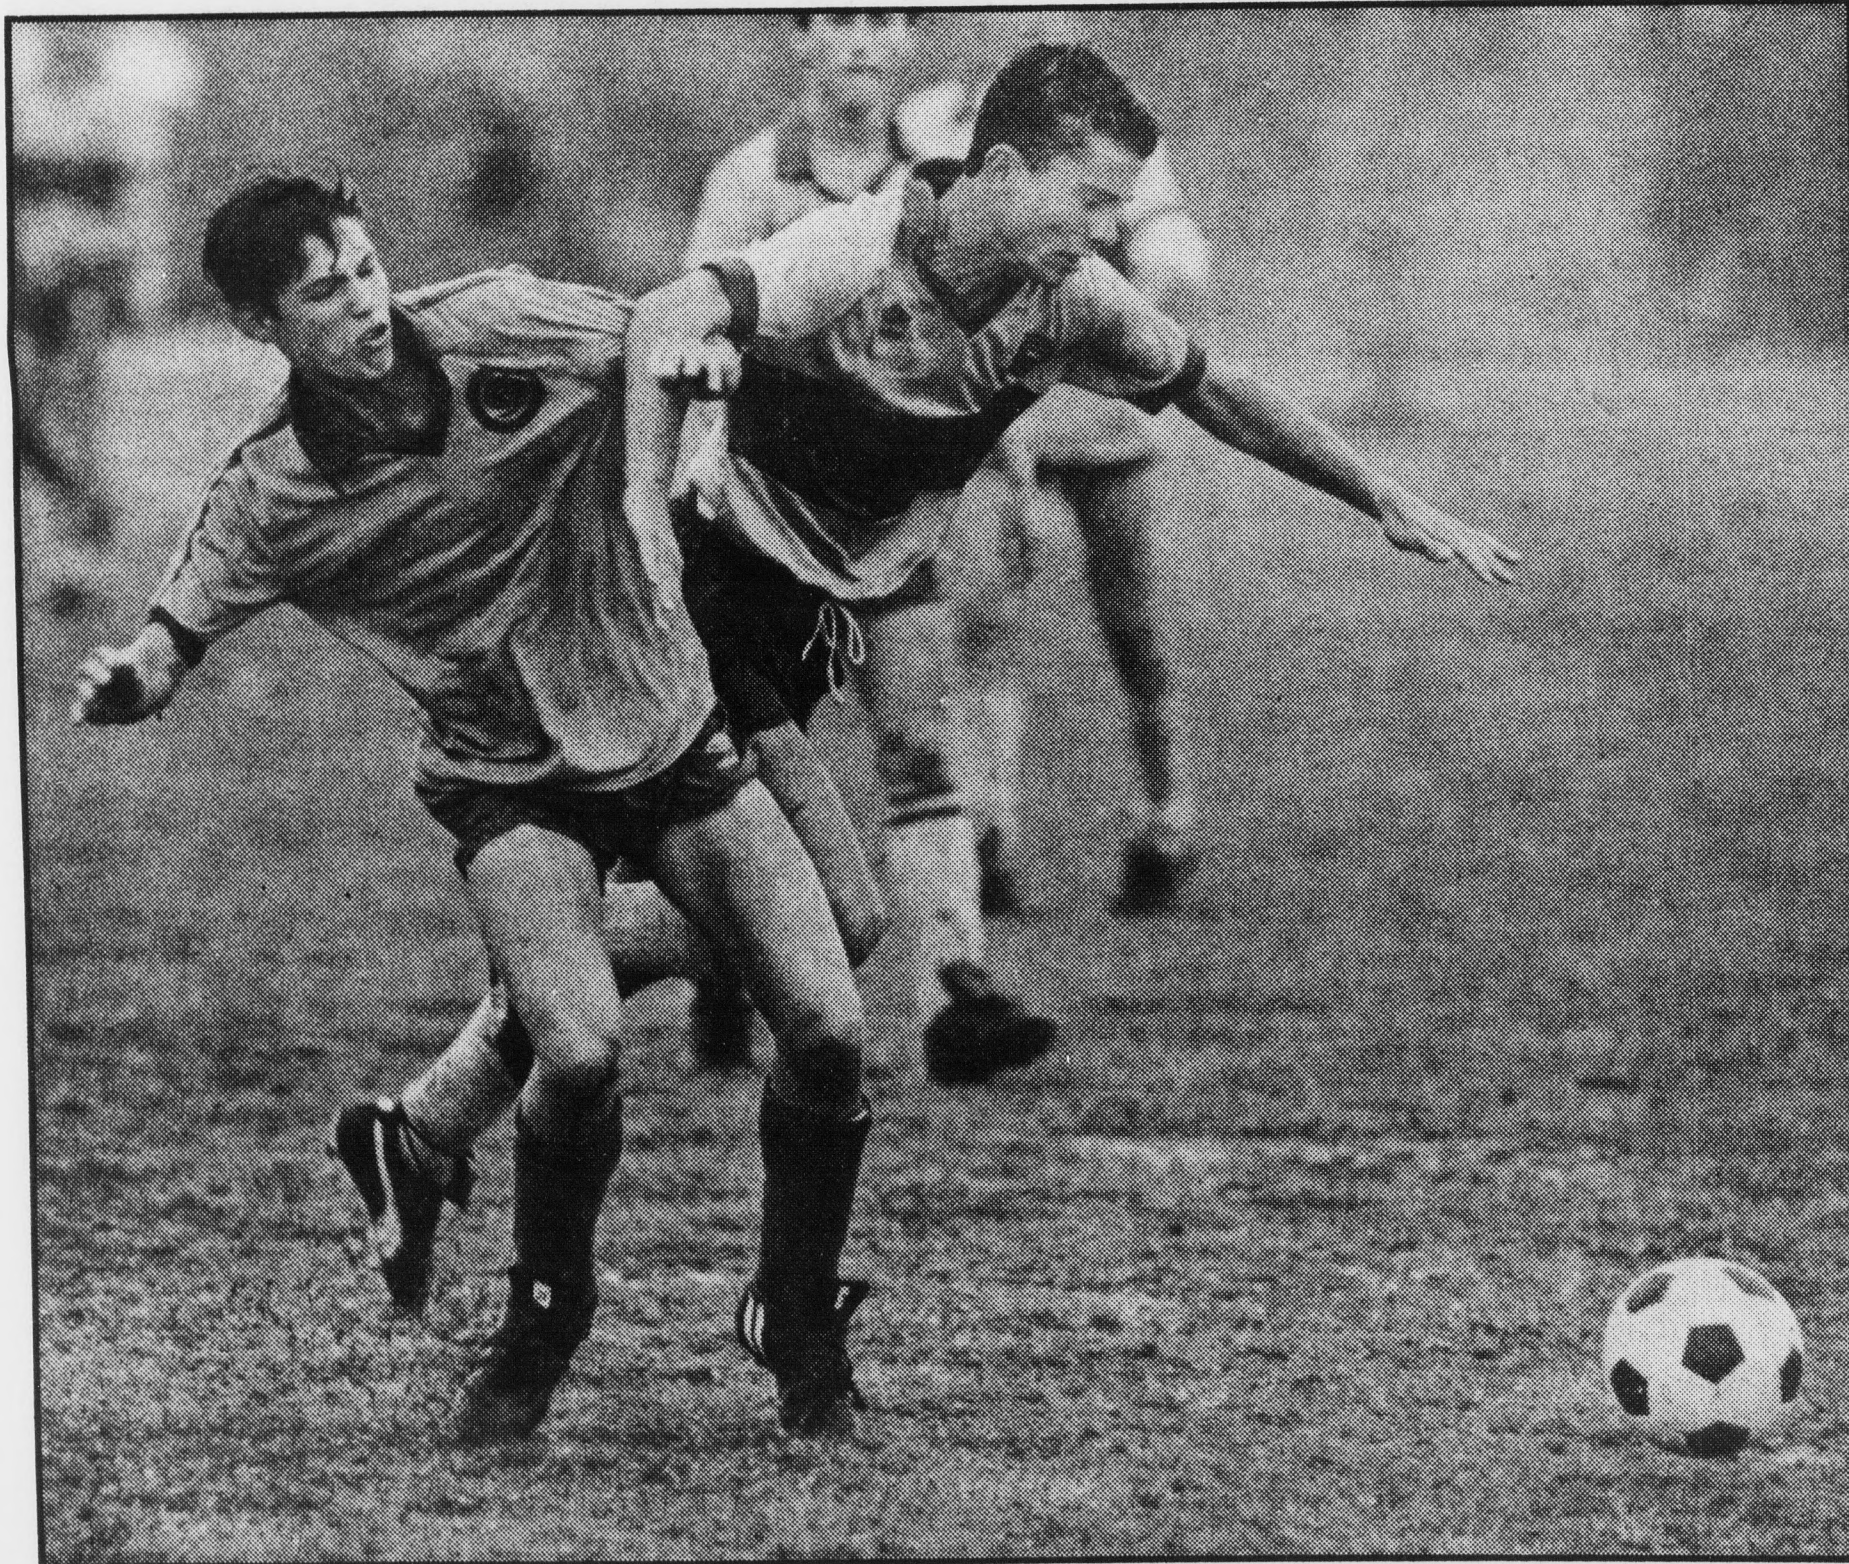

Sowers' game-winning shot came after a heated flurry in front of the Simi Valley net that opened the second half. The Pioneers, unaccustomed to playing from behind, looked dazed for several minutes after the go-ahead score.

Simi Valley charged fiercely in the final 20 minutes. Only late-game heroics from Collins and a veteran Brave defense prevented the tying the score.

During the frenzied Simi Valley rally attempt, a shot with 7:32 remaining smacked the pole of the goal, drawing an audible sigh from the Alta Loma bench. Moments later, the gambling Collins dove head-long to make diving stop of Steve MacKenzie's close-range attempt.

Thus, though Simi Valley controlled the tempo in the waning minutes, the Pioneers could not convert. At the final whistle, the Braves had held the lead and a boisterous group of West Valley soccer fans began a celebration.

Despite the rain, teams from throughout Southern California participated in the action.

Alta Loma takes three cage crowns

Alta Loma Junior High School won three of four divisions to dominate the fifth annual Rotary Basketball Tournament.

More than 500 seventh and eighth grade boys and girls from ten schools participated in the three-round, single elimination tournament. Magnolia Junior High in Chino, Chino High School and Etiwanda Intermediate School were the playing sites.

The Upland, Ontario, Rancho Cucamonga and Chino Rotary Clubs sponsored the event.

Alta Loma won both seventh grade events. The boys defeated Pioneer (Upland), 34-31, while the girls edged Etiwanda, 20-16. The Alta Loma girls won the eighth grade crown with a 22-19 win over Ramona (Chino).

Magnolia was the eighth grade boys winner over Upland, 47-34.

Baldy View

Jodi McJoynt, a 12-year-old from Upland, finished sixth in the all-around competition of the United States Gymnastics Federation's Girl's Advanced Optional level state championships in San Diego last week.

McJoynt, representing the Baldy View Gymnastics Club, entered the competition seeded seventh, but finished third in the bars and fourth in the beam competition to take the sixth-place all-around medal with a score of 33.0.

The advanced optional level is the highest level of competition for youth gymnasts in the state finals.

businessman and computer specialist.

Assessor R. Gordon Young faces two candidates who ran unsuccessfully for the office in 1982 and a newcomer to the race.

Relying solely on his own money, John Curry of San Bernardino, a tax auditor in the assessor's office, far outspent any other candidate in the primary, but finished third.

A crowded field of nine candidates was prompted by a grand jury indictment against Young, who was found innocent of charges that he misused county funds. Curry ran a hard-hitting campaign against Young.

Donald Williamson of Rialto, a deputy assessor-appraiser for Riverside County, ran fourth in the 1982 primary. The other candidate this year is Michael T. Smith of Ontario, a deputy assessor.

Five county officials are unopposed. They are District Attorney Dennis Kottmeier, Superintendent of Schools Charles Terrell, Auditor-Controller Errol Mackzum, Treasurer-Tax Collector Joe Bell and Public Administrator-Coroner Brian McCormick.

Nine Superior Court judges are unopposed. They are: Joseph Campbell, Clifton Allen, Kenneth Ziebarth, Bob Krug, Duke Rouse, Philip Schaefer, John Kennedy, Art McKinster and Dennis Cole.

The contested seats are:

- Office No. 4: Judge Rex Cranmer of Redlands and attorney Joseph Johnston of Rancho Cucamonga.

- Office No. 5: Michael A. Smith of San Bernardino, a deputy district attorney, and Bobby Vincent of Crestline, a Superior Court commissioner. Incumbent Roy Chapman is not seeking re-election.

- Office No. 11: Incumbent Rufus Yent of Barstow and Municipal Court Judge Carol Koppel of Apple Valley.

- Office No. 13: Judge James Edwards of Grand Terrace and attorney Sidney Jones of Upland.

There are two contested local races for Municipal Court seats. Judge Kenneth Kloefer of Rancho Cucamonga faces attorney Roger Remlinger of Upland in the Ontario-based West Valley Division. Judge Jacob Jager drew no opponent.

In the Fontana-based Central Division, Judge Phillip Morris of Rialto is challenged by Michael Abernathy of Fontana, a deputy district attorney.

Voting for Municipal Court candidates is by division. Superior Court candidates run countywide.
